Best Green Audit: BRONZE Qatr Al Nada School, Madinat Zayed

The Qatr Al Nada School has certainly put in their best efforts while implementing the green school audit. Having participated in the initiative since four years, they have over the years successfully managed to increase the number of teachers and students working on this project and complete their audit completely and accurately.

The teachers also worked very hard to ensure the audit was integrated into the school curriculum and was considered as a part of the students daily routine rather than as an extra-curricular activity.

For their water audit, they did their best to improve their performance and management of water resources by recycling their grey water. For their air audit, they increased the number of people travelling by shared means; they also increased their green areas in their land audit with native species of plants using organic farming techniques.

They have also done composting in the waste audit and worked towards reducing their waste generation and also installed solar panels in the school as a part of their energy audit.
